

JET LEAVERS

Tsugaru Aaron Asmann, Lindsay Benedict, Yumiko Dark, Michael Dawson, Brian Elstein, Peter Fairley, Rachel Johnson, Renato Nahibuan, Justin Nesbit, Michelle Nguyen, Michelle Payne, Ivan Sanchez, Jabari Smith, Kevin Tang.

Aomori Marti Deyo, Martha Gast, William Koch, Melissa McIvor, Karen Retter, Chris Swanson

Nanbu Wade Binneboese, Helen Bridges, Angela Corrie, Matthew Cosnett, Crystal Green, Weldon Green, Alli Hurley, Jason Johnson, Natalie Leong, Teresa Lepak, Alaine Nozawa, Melissa Nye, Erin Sandstrom, Mark Scott, Juliet White, Seth Hara

Shimokita Luke Elliot, Shane Menza, Brian Pouw, Tobin Walrod

Layout Designer/ Manager
Genevieve Murphy
Karen Retter

Editor
Marti Deyo
Contributors
Aomori JET and Community

おつかれさまでした!

Good Morning Aomori!

JET PROGRAMME, AOMORI
EDITION 10

Summer Edition
July-August 2009

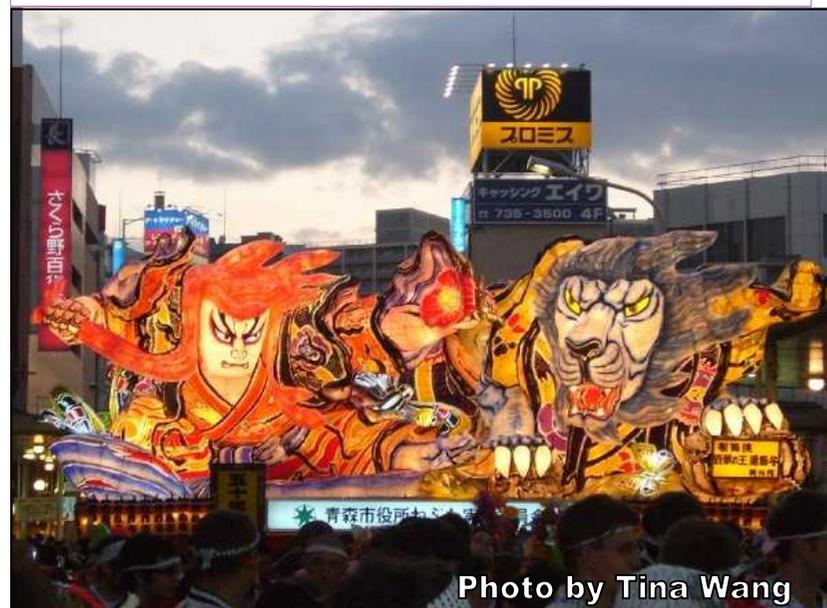

Photo by Tina Wang

CONTENTS

Two months at a Glance	2
Events/ Festivals	3
Japan Spotlight Tsuruta	4
ALT Talk	5
Featured JETS : First Years	6, 7
Featured Article : Show Me the Money	8, 9
JET Talk : Hokkaido	10, 11
Birthdays	11
Leavers Tribute	12

There are no goodbyes. Only see you later!

Summertime: school's almost out! By the time you're reading this, you are likely either leaving Aomori with a heart and head full of memories, or are in the process of saying goodbye to some of the best friends you may have in Japan. Summer is a mixed blessing in Aomori and on the JET Program. Aomori summers are short but every last minute is appreciated - you will never find yourself lacking company on a popular beach, and will likely have a very full social calendar as well, busy with barbecues, hiking, one of a myriad of festivals, or just doing anything to enjoy the outdoors and the lack of a need for 15 layers of clothing. However, this is also a tough time of year for those of us saying goodbye to close friends as we see them finish their JET journey and embark on new adventures. First-year JETs will especially have a hard time imagining what their lives will be like "after so-and-so leaves". While I don't think that this is a process that gets much easier with each passing year, those of us recontracting for a 2nd, 3rd, or 4th time also realize that each JET year brings new challenges and joys. One thing to look forward to, while our leaver friends are packing their bags, is the process of welcoming all the new JETs to the prefecture and letting their fresh perspective and enthusiasm replenish our own. Here's to the start of another fun and exciting JET year! To all of you who are leaving Aomori to start the next phase of your life: Otsukaresama, Omedetou, and Asobi ni kite ne. We will miss you!

Dana Berte

Last Two Months at a Glance Bryan Haut, Towada ALT

And so the time has come, once again, to prepare for the changes that July and August will bring. Many of us are beginning the process of unloading the possessions that we just can't take back home. The rest of us are deciding if we should buy that used snowboard, splurge on a new (old) car, upgrade to a new bike, or simply recoup the price of last month's road tax. For those of us who are staying, June brings the prospect of new ALTs and CIRs. We have begun emailing and surreptitiously facebook stalking successors in the hope that they will be welcome and fun additions to our towns.

In April we began a new school year. We watched our oldest students graduate, with tears streaming down their faces, and ululations flowing from their mouths. We welcomed new ichi-nenseis to our schools, and dusted off our self introduction lessons. Some of us have new supervisors, many have new JTEs, and most raised copious, bibulous glasses at new-year enkais.

But April brought more than changes at school. It also brought a reprieve from the snow (with fits and bursts, as flurries continued right up until April 30th). And the warmer weather brought forth the cherry blossoms for which Japan is renowned. In April, many JETs gathered around Hirosaki castle to enjoy fair food (doner kabab is rarer in Japan than a tanuki who isn't road kill), share beer with friends, and gaze upon the evanescent blossoms. But much like the blooms themselves, our enjoyment couldn't last forever, as cold rains disturbed an otherwise lovely afternoon.

And while the time has come and gone to pack away skis, and remove snow tires, the time for hiking, camping, and barbecues has arrived. ALTs have already re-conquered Hakkoda on foot. And barbecues have broken out in parks across the prefecture.

And just as we were settling into the flywheel of habit in the new school year, in our routines at work, we were given a welcome, and wonderful, break for Golden Week. Some of us flew off to exotic travel destinations: India, Malaysia, Thailand, Hong Kong. Some of us spent a welcome week at home in Australia, America, Canada (etc,etc,etc). And some of us took the chance to explore more of the island nation we currently call home, taking the ferry across to Hokkaido, or road tripping down to Osaka. And while we all had to assure our offices many times that no, no we don't have swine flu (and some of us were even held at the airport for tests), all of us made it back from vacation safe and sound.

And now we have the bittersweet summer months to look forward to. The bright months of summer, and the arrivals of new JETs is counterpointed by old friends leaving. Enjoy these friends while they are still here. And enjoy your summer.

This prefecture is so large that it's hard to sum it up so quickly. Of course, as the nation's 'food basket', the fresh produce and dairy you'll encounter here will be second to none. There's also the fact that the people are kind and welcoming and excited to see you, and the myriad ski hills that get the world's best powder come winter. There's honestly too much to cover in one article, but be sure to have some soup curry, to climb at least one mountain (or hill), and to get yourself a mari-mokori keitai strap, because your parents would be proud.

Key words for holidaying in Hokkaido:

On the top of the list for places to see:

Shiretoko, Rishiri-Rebun, Yotei-Kutchan area (including Niseko), Shakotan, Okushiri Island, Abashiri, Asahidake, Kusharo-ko, Hakodate, Noboribetsu, Shikotsu-ko and Toyako National Park

For the outdoor adventurer:

Rock climbing (south-west), Ice-climbing (north-central, north-east), dog sledding (Niseko, Ashikawa), ski/board/snow-shoe, paragliding (Rusutsu)

Foods: Ramen (miso or shio, depending on the city), sashimi, hairy crab kegani, anything dairy (in Winter, Niseko is home to some of Japan's finest eateries...just make sure to ask the locals where to go)

Top 3 Festivals (other than the snow festival):

Yosakoi-Soran Matsuri (early June)

Soukyo-Hyobaku Ice Festival (January~March)

Abashiri Drift-Ice Festival (Early February)

Happy Birthday to the Following JETs!

July

15 Aaron Asmann
16 Nicholas Swanson
18 Toby Walrod
19 Wyomia Mouwers
27 Gregory Hachenburg
27 Justin Nesbit
31 Genevieve Murphy

August

4 Kevin Tang
12 Christine Cruell
13 Wade Binneboese
30 Shane Menza
30 Stephen Pendlebury

Happy Birthday!

Hokkaido

Chelle Alford, Hokkaido JET

Just three days and you'll feel as though you're home' – it's a common saying here, referring to the complete ease that southern tourists express, the easy slide into an environment that is characterized by a distinct lack of hustle and bustle, a slower pace than much of Japan, and a natural beauty that, even after four years here, still manages to drop my jaw.

More than any other true thing you can say about Hokkaido, its natural environment is unrivaled: brilliantly blue volcanic lakes stretch to form cool, flat surfaces broken only by the reflection of the occasional cloud; hikes and traverses carry climbers from lush, thick forest to undulating tundra; and looming mountains stay capped with snow even in the heat of summer. While much is made of Furano and Biei's flower fields that stretch from hillside to valley, the scene beyond them is what really captures the eye. I think of only three colours when I think of Hokkaido: green, blue, and piercing white. I imagine Aomori to be similar, but it is said that the intensity here is tenfold and that the vegetation that demarks this island prefecture cannot be found elsewhere; not in Japan, not anywhere in the world.

Should you see Sapporo? Yes, absolutely. Hokkaido is still relatively 'young' and though the population is aging, the younger demographic thrives in the city and puts on some pretty impressive dance, skating, and fixie displays in Odori Park. Sapporo is charming with its wide streets and beautifully greened promenades, and Odori is worth a visit for a munch on cob corn and a stroll through 12 blocks of immaculately planned landscaping, and Susukino is a good night or two on the town if that's your thing. The Winter Sports Museum is also a winner. After that, get out of the city.

Folks will typically hit up Otaru or Hakodate next. My thoughts? Otaru has a canal. Hakodate has interesting architecture and local food, but takes a whole wack of time out of your trip if you're traveling there from Sapporo. If it were me, I'd take a hire car and start driving. Short stay? Shikotsu-ko and Toya National Park are hard to beat – vast beauty, charming onsens and steaming volcanoes are all found here. If you can, head to the Shiribeshi region, home to Niseko and arguably Hokkaido's extreme-sports center. Should time permit, head east, and keep heading east - any of the mountain passes you will encounter as you drive will guarantee waterfalls, wildlife, and primeval forest. Home to the World Natural Heritage-listed Shiretoko, the east also has some magical lakes (Kushiro, Kussharo, Akan, Mashu), and the Kushiro marshes. Like just about everywhere else on the island, onsens are in abundance, including a bundle of natural go-if-you-dare types. If you go east, bring a camera. And a tent. Watch for bears. Yeah, seriously.

Upcoming Work Event Schedule

July 3rd Leavers Party Aomori City

July 20th Marine Day (Holiday)

July– August 2009 JET Leavers departure from Aomori. Best of endeavors!

July 27th–29th Group A New JETs Tokyo Orientation

July 29th Group A JETs arrive in Aomori

August 3rd JET Nebuta

August 3rd– August 5th Group B JETs Tokyo Orientation

August 5th Group B JETs arrive in Aomori

August 20th–21st Group C JETs Tokyo Orientation

August 26th–28th Aomori Orientation

Festivals and Events

Kodomari	Soccer Beach Tourney	July 18, 19
Nagano	Summer Jazz Festival	3rd weekend July
Goshogawara	Bug & Fire Festival	Last weekend June
Hachinohe	Sansha Taisai Festival	End July, Beg. Aug
Shariki	Swim Competition	1st week Aug. (1 day)
Aomori	Nebuta Matsuri	1st week Aug. (1 week)
Hirosaki	Neputa Matsuri	1st week Aug. (1 week)
Goshogawara	Tachi-Neputa Matsuri	1st week Aug. (1 week)
Kuroishi	Yosare Matsuri	3rd week Aug. (2-3 days)
Ohma	Blue Marine Festival	3rd weekend Aug. (1 day)
Higashi Dori	Mura Festival	3rd weekend Aug. (1 day)
Fujisaki	Fireworks Festival	3rd weekend Aug. (1 day)

Spotlight: Tsuruta

Kevin Tang, Tsuruta ALT

Nestled in the middle of the Tsugaru region, Tsuruta (Crane Field) is home to about 15,000 people. It is said that location is everything and thanks to Goshogawara, Tsugaru City, Itayanagi, and Hirosaki as its neighbors, this idyllic, little Northern town is far from isolation. Attractions and conveniences are all within easy reach.

When it comes to internationalization, Tsuruta does rather well. Amongst the 3 JETs in town, Tsuruta also has a private coordinator from its sister city of Hood River, Oregon. The Tsuruta-Hood River relationship has been going strong for 32 years and is among the most active in Japan. Separate groups of junior high school students and high school students from Tsuruta make an annual pilgrimage for a week-long homestay in America. A group of Hood Riverians visits every 2 years and joins the townspeople in celebrating the summer festival. Highlights of Tsuruta Matsuri include making Japan's longest "sushi roll" and viewing fireworks over Lake Fujimi.

In Fujimiko Park, you can see not only Lake Fujimi, but you can cross over Tsuru no Maihashi, Japan's longest wooden footbridge (300 meters) that passes over the lake, and be blessed with longevity; so it has been said. Also in the park is an aviary housing several Red-crowned Cranes that were donated to the town from overseas. Sometime around Golden Week, Fujimiko Park as well as Sakura Zutsumi Park, the town's central park, has plenty of cherry blossoms for all to take in and both places boast fantastic views of Mt. Iwaki.

Before the summer sushi spectacle, in mid-June foreigners flock to Tsuruta for its annual Tsugaru-ben Taikai. Now in its 13th year, this regional dialect contest has been entertaining locals and visitors alike with skits, songs, and soliloquies, all performed by foreign talent. Also in June, townspeople take to the streets and inundate the plentiful snack bars to partake in Tsuruta's Sake Matsuri; 2009 marks the 22nd year of this popular pub crawl.

Due to its namesake, there is particular interest paid to cranes, long regarded as symbols of longevity and luck. The beauty of these birds and their spectacular mating dances are reflected in motifs throughout town. Aruja, the local farmers' market, features a restroom facility designed to appear as two cranes dancing. The main station, redesigned in 1999, has a roof shaped like wings. Other notable structures include the bookend statues at Tsuruta Bridge as well as the clocks in Fujimiko Park and Sakura Zutsumi Park.

With so much to offer, it's no wonder that I have called Tsuruta my home for the last 5 years. Recent project developments in town, such as the 2007 opening of the Hood River Mall (part of the SuperStore franchise) and the new Waterside Park that lies by the banks of the Iwaki River, continue to broaden its appeal.

As of this writing, discussions are in progress for Tsuruta to merge with Goshogawara. Perhaps the time for change has come for this peaceful town known for its cranes, apples, and grapes. It will be interesting to see if this plan will bear fruit. Like its namesake, I sincerely hope that Tsuruta will prosper and be longevous.

3) Sacrifice – one of my greatest passions is traveling. With ample salary and lengthy vacations, many ALTs take advantage of their JET experience to indulge in a spot of wayfaring. It was extremely painful for me to watch my friends travel all over Japan, as well as to Korea, Cambodia, Thailand, Laos, Nepal, India, China, and Jordan, and time and time again, I had to turn down invitations to go on these trips due to scheduling conflicts and/or budget considerations. It still hurts. But I believe the discipline applied to these decisions and sacrifices made in the area of something one desperately wants to do can be a big part of the reason that, after a few short years, one can begin to measure net worth in tens of thousands, rather than in pennies. Am I suggesting you should completely nix all your travel plans henceforth, lest you conclude your JET tenure in a miserably impoverished state? No, not at all. Number one, I didn't just hole up in Kawauchi-machi for 1,825 days. I actually took 7 international trips in 5 years (6 to North America, and 1 to the Philippines). Also, I think JET is an excellent opportunity for you to get out and see more of Asia, and I think you should try to take advantage of that. But I'm suggesting that you continue to look at the big picture. You might not be able to do it all right now. Even if it means painful sacrifices in the present or short term, it may behoove you to temper current opportunities in the light of financial goals and future plans.

And just in case you think I was able to accomplish all of the above as a result of exceptional intelligence or talent, well...I actually consider myself quite ignorant in the area of finances, and I think others could do better than me. I know next to nothing about running a business or generating streams of active and passive income. In addition to that, I have actually given away or lent out over $45,000 to family, friends, and an organization that I support (www.allpowerseminar.com, if you're interested in taking a look at it), and most of that just in the last year and a half. So if you did not make "dumb" decisions like these, you could actually do much better than me in the financial gains you make during your JET tour of duty.

However, I should point out that, regarding the above, I believe there is a divine law at work. If you give, you will get. But you have to give first. And if you think, "sure, it will be easy to give when I have enough money to do so", you're wrong, it won't. It's always easier to give $10 out of $100 than it is to give $10,000 out of $100,000. It's the same percentage, but it's always easier to give away the smaller amount, and you have to establish the habit with smaller amounts in order to be able to do it with larger amounts. I know a lot of you are already making regular contributions, for example, to Everest of Apples. But if you really are just barely feeding yourself and you have no spare money to give, you can still find other ways to give things. You can give your time, you can teach some free classes, or you can just see someone in need, and give them something you have. Just give when and where you see the opportunity, and I believe when you are in need, it will come back to you. If you don't believe this, then I definitely have another story I want to share with you. (Unfortunately, I can't do it here because I've run out of space! So you'll have to contact Marti or myself if you're interested in getting the full picture.)

So. Have you learned anything new? Or have you been reminded of something you know you should be doing? Sometimes it takes quite a few reminders for those who are slow (like me). I suppose you could sum it up in a nutshell as follows: dream big, have a goal and a plan, set aside savings, establish a tracking system, be disciplined, work hard, make sacrifices, and give to others when and where you see the opportunity. For a good number of you there's probably no rush on most of this. I'm in my mid-30's, so many of you have 10 - 15 years on me in terms of your time available to figure out your career, future, and retirement plans. But, like me, I'm guessing you're not getting any younger. So it may be worthwhile to take stock of your financial life. Where are you at? Where are you going? Where do you want to get to? How are you going to do it? I hope you can use some of the above suggestions to help answer these questions. If you want to further discuss this, or any of my favorite topics – money, travel, sports, movies, and/or Prohibit – feel free to contact me (tobywalrod@gmail.com).

Featured Article Toby Walrod, Mutsu ALT

SHOW ME THE MONEY

(Originally a 3-part article – Show Me The Culture, Show Me The Experience, and Show Me The Money, but had to be cut due to space limitations. If you are interested in the other (shorter) parts, you can contact Marti or me. Thanks.)

I don't know what your motivations were for applying to the JET Programme. For me, there were a lot of reasons, but one very significant one was finances. When I came on JET in 2004, I probably had a net worth of about -$50,000. Now, 5 years later, I estimate my net worth somewhere around $75,000. $125,000 increase in 5 years is hardly the stuff of legend, but I do feel extremely blessed and somewhat proud to have gotten that far; it is due in large part to JET, and if there is any information I can provide that might help out others who are struggling financially, I would like to offer it. I don't mention those numbers for the purpose of ostentation, that is not the intention at all, but I want to give some real figures so that you can see what is possible with a big dream, hard work, sacrifice, and careful tracking and planning. So, how did it happen for me? Well, granted, I'm compelled to attribute a portion of it to serendipity. Some of the money is tied up in investments, and so the value and figures fluctuate based on a lot of factors, but for one thing, I was lucky enough that my condo in Canada increased in value during the time I was in Japan. My equity in the condo probably accounts for about 1/2 of the above number. But the other half was simply gained through the ideals that everybody knows, but most people don't want to abide by: 1) discipline, 2) hard work, and 3) sacrifice

1) Discipline – I have recorded and tracked virtually every financial transaction that has taken place in my life during my time in Japan. Do I recommend that you do the same? Well, not necessarily. I'm a very extreme person. But at a minimum, I would recommend: (1) Have a goal. Think about where you want to be financially when you finish your JET tenure, and start to put a plan in place to get there, if you haven't already done so. 2). Get a separate account, maybe a post office account, and shuttle some savings into this account on a regular basis. Do this first, as soon as you get paid, not at the end of the month with whatever is left over, because usually nothing is, if you are like most people. (3) Have at least some sort of basic tracking system, whether it's just scribbling notes in your bank book, or keeping a separate notebook, or using an excel file. I do all of the above, and my budgeting, tracking, and forecasting systems have developed into something that probably appears rather complex to the casual observer. You don't necessarily have to do all that, but do something so that you have a record and an awareness of where your money is going. Do you realize that if you stay here 5 years, you will have well over $150,000 pass through your hands just from your JET salary? How much of that do you want to, and can you hold on to?

2) Hard Work – how do I put this?...I work hard. Very hard. You don't have to be quite as psychotic as I am, and work 15 - 16 hours a day, but the point is to try to do a little extra, go the extra mile when you get the chance.

ALT Talk

Michael Dawson, Hirosaki ALT

Summertime is upon us! The season of festivals, camping trips, barbecues and the dreaded mushi-atsui weather. On the Tsugaru side, the first week of August is packed with three major festivals, Aomori's Nebuta, Tachineputa in Goshogawara and Hirosaki's Neputa festival. Watching and participating in these events is one of the highlights of being in Aomori. It's a fun time of year, but also a bittersweet one for many JETs.

The end of the winter and start of spring may be the symbolic beginning of 'the new year' for much of Japanese society, but in the JET community August is the time of renewal. For the leavers, it's time for us to start packing up and say goodbye to everyone and everything that has been a part of our lives here in Aomori. For those who are staying, it will be hard to see many of the friends you've made suddenly leave (although hopefully you can score some of the great stuff that they're desperately trying to get rid of). Then, just as abruptly as you've said goodbye to your old friends, there will be dozens of eager new JETs arriving ready to receive your stockpile of sempai wisdom. Not to mention twenty more days of nenkyuu to reignite your travel dreams!

Whether we have been here for one year or five, our time in Aomori has changed us. It has become a part of who we are and we will carry it with us for the rest of our lives. Likewise, many of the people here whose lives we touched will remember us for longer than we might think. Although the JET Program's effectiveness in improving English education might be debated by some, we have opened our students' minds to new cultures and new possibilities, planting seeds that will blossom in the years to come. Not only has Japan changed us, but it is my hope that through our own individual contributions, no matter how small, we have collectively helped to change Japan.

First Year JETs

Name: Laura Sacchetta

Job Description: Full time Sannohe High School ALT, part-time Takko and Nanbu High School ALT.

One thing few people know about you: I'm an open book so people know all there is to know about me!

One word relating to your first year on JET: Enlightenment

Most humorous or memorable experience in Aomori: Most memorable experience was spending my birthday with 6 of my co-workers. They took time out to organise a birthday dinner for me. The memories formed that night will always stay with me.

Words of advice or anything you want to say whether to the leavers or to the JET community: To the leavers: Hope you had an amazing time in Japan. Wishing you all the best in your future endeavours and live life with no regrets!

Featuring our First Year JETS!!!

Name: Adam Mott

Job Description: Misawa-shi ALT, devourer of kaiten zushi, shining beacon of JET community

One thing few people know about you: I have six tattoos

One word relating to your first year on JET: Sweetness

Most humorous or memorable experience in Aomori: Giving impromptu speeches in Japanese

Words of advice or anything you want to say whether to the leavers or to the JET community: "Nanbu owns Tsugaru- you heard me"

Name: Bryan Haut

Job Description: ALT at Sanbongi Nogyo, an agricultural high school where I get to chill with farmboys and horses.

One thing few people know about you: I was once arrested on suspicion of First Degree Handsomeness. The charges were later dropped.

One word relating to the first year on JET: Gleichgewichtszustandwiederherstellungsmoeglichkeit

Most humorous or memorable experience in Aomori: I participated, way back in September, in my town's mikoshi-carry.

Afterwards we had a big party that included a whole lot of nihonshu. During the party I noticed a man in a leather jacket with a mohawk. I walked up to him and said, in faltering Japanese, "Your hair is great." He looked at me, and said in English while pointing at himself, "I am motorcycle. Harley Davidson." He then paused, grabbed his crotch and yelled, "ALSO HARLEY DAVIDSON."

Words of advice or anything you want to say whether to the leavers or to the JET community: Via con nachos

PS: When translated, that German word makes perfect sense.

Name: Christy Bahr

Job Description: singing, dancing, and playing with 16,000 elementary school children in Aomori City

One thing few people know about you: I've never had the chicken pox.

One word relating to your first year on JET: Boombastic

Most humorous or memorable experience in Aomori: The bike accident with Tesia in front of the shiyakusho.

Words of advice: Behave!

Name: Tesia Smith

Job Description: hanging out with Aomori city teenagers

One thing few people know about you: I played drums in a colonial fife and drum corp when I was little and was in the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, right after the Baha Men and LFO, yea that's right, who let the dogs outttt!

One word relating to your first year on JET: woah

Most humorous or memorable experience in Aomori: The bike accident with Christy in front of the shiyakusho.

Words of advice or anything you want to say whether to the leavers or to the JET community: To the leavers: I'm mad at you.

Name: Greg Hachenburg

Job Description: Semi-regular ALT. I teach at all of the Hachinohe Elementary Schools, 2 Middle Schools in Shingo area (near Christs' grave), and 3 Elementary Schools in the Shingo area.

One thing few people know about you: I can say the alphabet backwards in under 4 seconds.

One word relating to your first year on JET: Pneumonoultramicroscopicsilicovolcanoconiosis

Most humorous or memorable experience in

Aomori: Participating in the BFWF Round Robin, and receiving my finished story about Captain Slowtoad's Mariokart duel on a submarine for the fate of the world.

Words of advice or anything you want to say whether to the leavers or to the JET community: Zombies can be anywhere and strike at any moment. Be prepared, and always carry a blunt object.

Name: Karen Eaton

Job Description: CIR, Tsuruta-town

One thing few people know about you: My favourite Japanese food is Daikon

One word relating to your first year on JET: Always learning something new

Most humorous or memorable experience in

Aomori: The winter! It was amazing to experience living somewhere where everything around me was completely surrounded in snow. Absolutely beautiful!

Words of advice or anything you want to say whether to the leavers or to the JET community: Make sure you get enough 'me' time.

Name: Karesa Crockett

Job Description: grammar game planner and American cultural representative

One thing few people know about you: I slept with a stuffed panda bear from the age of three until I was in college.

One word relating to your first year on JET: rewarding

Most humorous or memorable experience in Aomori:

Hiking five hours to the bottom of Hakkoda then realizing we had no way back up to the car. Miraculously, a friend came walking through the parking lot exactly when we were our most desperate. Thank God!

Words of advice or anything you want to say whether to the leavers or to the JET community: Wherever you go, continue to represent and reflect on your own culture as well as different cultures you encounter. We influence lives.

OTHER FIRST YEAR JETS: Grahame Geissler, Jessica Conklin,

Brian Pouw, Julie Austad, Takefumi Hirai, Brandon Cline,

Michelle Payne, Aaron Chambers, Katie Mulroy, Nicholas

Swanson, Christine Cruell, Nancy Velasquez, Michael Larson,

Seth Hara, Taylor Austad, Ariel Angelotti, Ted Lackman, Stephen

Cravak, Gabriel Reed, Alex Queen Paul Boland, Ruairi

McLaughlin, Angela Corrie, Alyssa Hoey, Lindsay Amor, Matthew

Smith, Michael Smith, Alison Sprung, Joel Gruwell.

